James Nottingham was filmed by Channel 4 in 1999 for the pioneering work he was doing in schools in the UK to develop children’s resilience, love of learning and inquiry skills. Since then James has supported teachers throughout the world to raise their performance to outstanding, and founded a multi-million pound project to raise achievement in schools that has recently won an award for innovation. He is a sought-after keynote speaker, consultant and professional coach.

“Superb, James. By far the best presentation I have seen. I would love more of my teachers to hear your message”

Peter Ayson, Headteacher, Meadowbank School, New Zealand

Bill Martin has been a primary teacher, a deputy in a middle school and Headteacher of four High Schools. He is warm, charismatic and inspiring to work with. In 1993 he was recognised as one of Top Ten Leaders in the USA, with two of his schools winning the country’s top accolade for achievement. Bill is now in demand across the world for helping schools sustain success through the development of a shared vision, leadership capacity and supportive cultures for learning.

“An inspiring day! The mixture of discussion and activities was very well balanced. At no point did I feel I was simply “talked at.” Realistic solutions to common problems were made very clear. Thank you for such practical and good advice”

Ragnhild Isachsen, Headteacher, Hogsnes School and Kindergarten, Norway
